Q: ASP.NET MVC 2 Routing error for default controller? I am new to MVC and am starting to develop my first application. For the first controller I want a basic address page that consists of a contact and a routing table. From what I understand of the process, the following should work: 1. Define the route like so: routes.MapRoute("Address", "home", new { controller = "Home", action = "Index" }); I've looked at other MVC tutorials and everything seems to be somewhat different. Is it just the way I have done it that I have not got to work? Or am I missing something? A: I think you need to define your route like this: routes.MapRoute("Home", // Route name "{controller}/{action}/{id}", // URL with parameters new { controller = "Home", action = "Index", id = UrlParameter.Optional } // Parameter defaults); Also, the example you posted is wrong for MVC. You should not put URL parameters as part of the route definition. size(), 0); } } for (size_t i = 0; i!= m_errorPrefixes.size(); i++) { int count = 0; for (size_t j = 0; j!= m_errorPrefixes[i].size(); j++) count++; if (count >= m_recoveryPrefixes.size()) m_errorPrefixes[i].resize(count + 1); } } void HTTPErrorHandlerParser::addPermanentErrorPrefix(std::shared_ptr errorPrefix) {

Q: Can't select downcast operator when downcasting from abstract class to concrete class I have a class, A, that is an abstract class. It has a private void writeInfo(String msg) { // writes info to a log file log.info(msg); } It is a subclass of a class, B, which has a private void writeInfo(String msg) { // writes info to a log file } I want to write information to the log file from either class. So I have the abstract class A that has the writeInfo(String msg) method. I want to use the class B with all the write information to write to the log file, but to extend the abstract class from A so I can call the super class's write method from each subclass. This is what I have tried, but it doesn't work. public abstract class A { private void writeInfo(String msg) { log.info(msg); } } public class B extends A { // I want to call this from the abstract class // because this is what is done // from the subclasses @Override public void writeInfo(String msg) { super.writeInfo(msg); } } public class C extends B { // I want to call this from the abstract class // because this is what is done // from the subclasses @Override public void writeInfo(String msg) { super.writeInfo(msg); } } A: I don't know what you meant by it "doesn't work" and I don't even know if it's what you tried to do. But here is an example with an abstract method and two concrete subclasses. package com.example; public abstract class Person { private void writeInfo() { System.out
