The present invention relates to a method of providing communication services, such as voice communication services, using internet protocol (IP) transmission methods and a network supporting these methods. With the recent introduction of various network technologies, such as IP (Internet Protocol) as an internetworking technology, a broadband communication system using IP transmission has been introduced. A broadband communication system includes not only a communication line designed for a wideband transmission, such as ADSL (Asymmetric Digital Subscriber Line), but also a communication line designed for a narrowband transmission, such as PHS (Personal Handyphone System) or ISDN (Integrated Services Digital Network). Japan has also started to promote a network revolution in which a residential gateway and a local network are merged together. That is, so-called "Hybrid IP broadband Broadband (HIBB)" has been started, and service providers have started to offer video communication, such as video on demand or video teleconferencing, using broadband communication services. This hybrid IP broadband broadband (HIBB) will be described with reference to FIG. 3. In the hybrid IP broadband broadband (HIBB), a PHS base station 4 is connected to a telephony server 3 through an IP phone 2, and the telephony server 3 is connected to a public switched telephone network (PSTN) 5 via a normal digital terminal such as an ISDN terminal. The PHS base station 4 receives a message 0cc13bf012
