Stepping into the life of an alien egg may sound like a strange idea for a game, but the concept makes a great great game design. Jump and slide your way to freedom, instead of traveling on land and walking on the ground. An Alien Egg Game can be played by anyone. Your character can be male or female. The graphics are stunning, the gameplay perfect for people with no prior experience in games. Features: -100+ levels spanning across 9 worlds. -Time Trial mode -36 achievements -4 star ratings -Share score and play with friends on Facebook. -This is the first in the Alien Egg Series. In the future, a more complex version of Alien Egg: Ascent will be released with 12 levels and many more levels. Alien Egg: Ascent is already a full fledged game. When it is finished, it will be much more than just a game. App Store Reviews: "Spunky and fun" (InTouch Games) "Another piece of awesome" (iosgamerz) "Awesome: The game looks great, is reasonably priced, has some really fun gameplay..." or 01/01/2014 The Captain's Tailor was a 1,200 tonne freighter. At the time it was built, it was an impressive ship. It could fit 36 passengers and could cross oceans in just 5 days. When it was built, there had been no large liners, the world had been split, as this state of affairs was in 1913. It had been the largest freighter that had ever crossed the Atlantic. It was built to be that, it was the fastest ship that had ever been built. It was also the highest speed ship that had ever sailed on the Atlantic. The ship was 1274ft long, 354ft wide, and its length from the widest point to the end of its keel was 2332ft. The ship could only reach a top speed of 21 knots, at this she could do about six knots per hour. Every ship in her time could only make 5.5 knots, including ones that were made today. The Captain's Tailor had been built in June of 1911, on the Tippera Dock at Sunderland, Sunderland was a town in England in the United Kingdom. The Monarch had ordered this ship to be built to be the fastest ship that had ever been built, and to cross the oceans from east to west. Due to this, the construction had begun 7 months earlier than the Queen's ship, The Royal Abbey of Mary Immaculate. Due to her specifications as a liner or ocean cruiser, it could carry 1,000 tons of cargo or 900 passengers. It had been an illusion though, because the most it had ever had was up to 875 passengers, and there had been a ship that had only had 805 passengers. This was because of the lower deck being used for freight. From top to bottom, the ship had 94 rooms, with 64 single berths, 14 twin berths and 20 suites. On the lower decks, she had a crew of 82 to operate her, from the captain down to the 11 decks. The ship was immaculately clean, with no smokers in its crew. The Captain's Tailor was built there for two very good reasons: It was cheaper to build a ship in England than it was in the United States. Also, ships were built quicker there. The ship had been built in five stages, she had first been floated, then she had first been pumped out. While this was happening, this ship had been going so fast that water had been escaping out of its hull. The four torpedo

Q: Why does our MySQL Database take up so much RAM? I have a Linux CentOS server with 2GB installed RAM. I tried running a simple script to query our MySQL database, `mysql -uroot -p` It is a remote server, so I edited the script to run as a specific user on the remote server and bind the database to localhost instead of 10.0.0.1 After completing this, my RAM usage increased nearly to 900MB. Running the script stopped because it ran out of memory. I stopped the `bind_address` connection and the RAM usage instantly returned to normal. I created a test database on localhost and tested my script and it still consumes nearly 300MB. I thought I found the problem here and ran MySQL Tuner to optimize my database. The results for my MySQL Tuner were that our InnoDB Cache Memory was just under 3MB, the `ZI/GLOBAL_OFFSET` table size was 153MB and the size of the `VACUUM MANAGEMENT` buffers (pmstat for a local server) were 268MB. I upped our RAM (now 6GB and it is still only using half of the 6GB) but still have the same problem. Does anyone have any ideas as to what I can do to get this to work? Any help would be much appreciated. A: Your available memory does not mean you are using available memory. It is your head telling you that. In fact, for 99% of PHP sites you would not have problems in any case. However, poor design can force poor PHP programmers to have it consume more memory than a properly written PHP app. One good example of this
