Hi I am trying to use array check if the element present or not if not present add to the array and check for the presence of element. I want to write a generic function to check whether the element exist or not. For ex i have a array like this: const a = ['c','b','a'] In this case the generic function should return true. const a = ['c','b','a'] This is one of them that should be true because the 2nd element is removed. A: If the issue is that you want to remove a single element and use if the list were static and you couldn't remove elements, you could use a custom Predicate like this: interface Element { name: string; } function isElementPresent(list: Element[]): boolean { return list.some(el => el.name ==='s'); } Playground or function isElementPresent(list: Element[]): boolean { return list.length > 0; } Playground But in your case you can use Array.indexOf() function isElementPresent(list: Element d0c515b9f4
