Nayanthara.Hawaii's fire engine call function Each weekday morning at 8:00am, each and every Fire engine call response in Hawaii is broadcast live on U.S. Fire's website and all members have access to this live feed. This arrangement puts an incredible amount of information into the hands of all fire service personnel in the state. Anyone who logs into the site will be able to watch live and listen to a live fire engine dispatch. This allows the public to watch fire suppression vehicle responses as they take place; whether that be a house fire, vehicle fire, structure fire, auto fire, train fire, helicopter fire and any number of other types of fires. This is a way that the public may see exactly what the average fire service operator sees as he or she alerts the appropriate personnel to the emergency. All emergency departments on Hawaii Island have tuned in as a live feed for a number of years. The regional dispatch center receives fires and medical emergencies from the entire state as well as the territorial dispatch center in Honolulu receives any emergency calls on Oahu Island. According to the Fire Service's recorded statistics as of December 2010, there are over 2,700 calls made daily in which the public is alerted of a fire, medical, auto crash or other type of incident. The majority of calls are done through 911 on Oahu; however, all islands can make a call to the islandwide monitoring center at any time. From a public safety viewpoint, the process is simple. A radio user will pick up a mobile radio at his home and then call into
