By Barbara RaabeSt. Petersburg TimesOct. 8, 2012It was a joyful mix of new and old dance styles under the lights of the Tampa Bay Times Forum on Sunday. Shivering in the cold, Ray Boucher took center stage after enjoying the passionate warmth of the Tampa Bay Rays home opener with his wife and three daughters. By Bruce RankinThe Times of Northwest FloridaMay 28, 2014A group of about 100 University of Tampa students have stayed together for more than a year and counting, studying for a student-operated international health initiative that brings free medical and dental care to Hondurans living in Florida. "I think its very difficult because youve been with a group of people for so long and youre used to your environment and your friends," said Suzanne Velasquez, a psychology major from Woodbine, N.J. "But I do love them and I look forward to seeing them." Full story By Anna Teresa SalazarThe Times of Northwest FloridaMarch 6, 2014For more than seven months, Miguel Angel Aguilar was locked in a ghostly, tiny prison he shared with dozens of other men in the city of La Ceiba in Honduras. His family had given up trying to find out what had happened to him and he had no idea where they were. "He was worried about food, but the five years he was gone were tougher," said Tania Aguilar, who runs an organization called DARE Honduras that works to advance the rights of women in Latin America. Full story By Anthony Brown - Associated PressTampa TribuneDec. 31, 2014TAMPA - A Latin American scholar brought to the University of Tampa to work with its president on the latter's possible Pulitzer Prize-winning book on latin American politics ended up being much more, so much that the president is now being asked to write the memoir. The scholar, Prof. Gilberto A. Salom, is a political scientist at the University of Florida. The book, reportedly to be published next year, is titled "It Is With Me, Lyndon." The Pulitzer committee has not yet announced a Pulitzer winner for 2014. Full story

By Michelle MitchellThe Topeka Capital-JournalJuly 2, 2014It's a question that's been asked for at least a decade: Will the repeal of the Affordable Care Act lead to a decline in physician supply, especially in rural areas? Just don't ask a doctor. "It's a fraught question. I don't like to address it," said Dr. James Petersen, a physician in the northern and eastern parts of Kansas. On July 1, the first day the federal exchange could advertise its new health insurance plans, doctors received more than 70,000 applications for insurance in the first 30 minutes. Full story By Michael K. CorneliusThe Associated PressJune 10, 2014Under the plan, insurers would be required to spend 85 percent to 90 percent of their premium dollars on medical claims, the money that pays for doctors' visits, prescriptions and hospital stays. That would drive down costs for consumers and force insurers to rein in expenses. Over time, the idea is to spread that burden more widely across costs, such as co-pays and deductibles. Full story By Jonathan D. SalantThe New York TimesApril 9, 2014In the first three months of 2013, the number of doctors who closed their practices because they couldn't make money from patients dropped from 730 to 175. Some of those doctors are now working in long-term care facilities, where they can charge higher rates, but many are still operating clinics. Full story The FX drama, which also stars The Walking Deads Gillian Jacobs and is executive produced by That 70s Show stars Girlss Lena Dunham and Jemima Kirke, is based on the memoir by Jenny Lawson, a writer who has authored a dozen books, including I Like You, Honey, I Like Your Hair but We Want To Make A Change.The mother of three, she spoke at length about the inspiration for her book, the challenges of adoption and the nature of motherhood during a recent phone interview. She described her first child, "Hailey," as a "mousy mess" who has since grown into a confident teenager with braces who is currently planning to go to college, like Hannah. Full story 5ec8ef588b
