The optimal preoperative mitral annuloplasty ring size for mitral leaflet prolapse remains controversial. We investigated the safety and efficacy of a tight and a wide annuloplasty ring in patients with isolated posterior mitral leaflet prolapse. Between July 2004 and December 2010, a total of 143 patients (78 males; mean age 60 ± 11 years) underwent mitral valve surgery for isolated posterior mitral leaflet prolapse at our institute. These patients were divided into two groups: 109 patients in the tight annuloplasty group and 34 patients in the wide annuloplasty group. The endpoints were the operative and early outcomes, including death, re-operation, atrial fibrillation, and tricuspid regurgitation. There were no significant differences in baseline characteristics between the two groups. Postoperatively, in-hospital mortality was 1.4% (2/143), and no patient experienced thromboembolism.
